

Nobody's Victim: Language, Culture and Change

A presentation and conversation with author and cultural critic R. Clifton Spargo. In his presentation, Spargo challenges us by exploring questions such as:

- How do media representations of rape and abuse shape public attitudes?
- What role does language play as advocates and activists seek to frame the issue of sexual violence, while calling the public to action?
- Why is the creation of new forms of media so critical to challenging a world that too often allows, and even encourages, violence against women?
- How are survivors “taking the narrative back” through the sharing of their own testimonies?
